

TASKS:

- a. Watch the documentary "The True Cost" on YouTube.
<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=nxhCpLzreCw&t=4325s>
- b. Answer the following questions regarding the film.

Which image or which scene from the film do I particularly remember or has particularly impressed me?
Explain why.

The scene which me inmpressed the most was at 1:18:45. The music an the radical contrast between the single cuts were touching me in a new way.

What feelings did the film trigger in me?

After I watched the movie I was very sad and started thinking about the real price we pay for our great life here.

Did I learn anything new through the film? If yes, what?

We need to start caring about the real things in life, not materialistic things like clothing.

Which statements do I remember about the importance of fashion and how the fast fashion industry works?

The Fasionindustry has only one goal: To make profit.

What connections can I make between my personal opinions on fashion and the fashion industry and the statements in the film?

I also think that we need to change the system: Most of the statements reflect my personal opinion.

It's an investigative and partisan documentary: at which points in the film is this particularly clear?

The film was very clear in the following points:

- start changing the system
- real people pay the price for the fancy and high gloss polished clothing stores

Where and with what cinematic means is the viewer's opinion guided?

Basicly most of the time a scientist/sociologist spoke, and then came some cut scenes with the cruel reality

How did you like the documentary in general? Give an overall rating.

Please upload your results to Moodle by Monday, January 18th, 3 p.m.